

Family law. Naturally.

Getting married or living together

Are you concerned that your business or property assets could be at risk? If so, speak to us about a pre-nuptial agreement. This may help protect assets in the event of relationship break-down or divorce.

Currently, unmarried couples have limited rights and without a co-habitation agreement, you could be in a vulnerable position if your partner dies or you decide to separate.

Separation or divorce

Breaking up is hard and you need a solicitor who will fight hard for your best interests, in terms of your family, property and business interests.

Our experienced solicitors provide support and guidance, explaining the procedures and your options throughout the legal process.

Not all relationship breakdowns need to be acrimonious and we offer the option of collaborative law where we work together to find a solution which is acceptable to both parties. Throughout the case the partners commit to negotiating constructively, avoiding inflammatory language and, most importantly, putting the interests of the children first.

Protecting your financial security

The Beswicks team has particular expertise in advising business owners and high net worth individuals who will be concerned to protect their assets and business interests during a relationship breakdown.

We work closely with a number of pension experts, actuaries, accountants and other professionals to secure the best outcome for you.

Safeguarding the children

Protecting the interests of the children is paramount. Our family team will support you and the children in agreeing where they will live, how much time they will spend with each parent and ensuring their financial security for the future.

Our childcare specialists will advise families and young people on care proceedings, adoption and disrupted adoption as well as arranging special guardianship orders.

We represent parents and children in complex court cases relating to non-accidental injury, sexual and emotional abuse.

FUNDING YOUR CASE

If you are concerned about being able to afford legal advice, you may be eligible for public funding. Beswicks is one of a small number of firms with a Public Funding Franchise and we will be able to advise you regarding your eligibility.
